FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

IAPD Welcomes New Member Fluoron Inc.

OVERLAND PARK, Kans. – The International Association of Plastics Distribution is pleased to announce that Fluoron Inc., a manufacturer, has joined the association. The company is headquartered in Elkton, MD, USA and specializes in products for the pulp and paper, printing and marine industries. Fluoron Inc. was founded by Frank M. Chapman, a pioneer in the fluoropolymer industry and a member of The Plastics Hall of Fame. More information is available at www.fluoron.com.

Fluoron Inc. joined IAPD in May 2013, along with four other companies. The five new member companies joining in May set an association record for new members in one month. The IAPD Board, Membership Committee and staff are all happy to see so many new members who appreciate the value of IAPD membership.

“I am pleased to welcome Fluoron as a new IAPD member,” said Susan E. Avery, CAE, IAPD Chief Executive Officer. “IAPD represents that plastics distribution supply chain and most importantly, champions the use of plastics in applications and the use of distribution as the way to market. Companies who are admitted to IAPD as full members of the association must evidence their commitment to the plastics distribution supply chain. The association will be their essential source for networking, training tools, education, information and insight. Through IAPD, they will have access to the thought leaders in the plastics distribution industry.”
